THE DOCTOR WHO WASN'T

THE NEW MERCS ARE 50% QUIETER

...so quiet, they sound like they're far behind your boat

New silence from SOUND engineering

Mercury engineering has developed a new silencing system that makes the new Mercs sound like there's no prop. The new low- and mid-cycle Mercs are actually 50% quieter.

As quiet as silence is, not by wrapping enough lead padding around it, but we didn't want to smother Merc's drive, trim, turn, or performance. Merc's silencing system required redesigning, new engineering... from top to bottom. Here's how we did it.

■ New Mercs have a novel cupped cooling (intake), set of struts that is drastically reduced from both the powerhead and the drive shaft housing. This tapered cooling does not "breakdown" the sound from the engine.

■ All resonances for control valves and fuel lines are ready for the engine and the springs are sealed with composite closures. The sound from the powerhead is effectively trapped inside the cooling.

■ Mercury used a completely new principle... a wall of water... to reduce the exhaust. The engine's discharge exhaust system is used to surround Merc's new exhaust exterior pipe and prevent exhaust noise from escaping through the drive shaft housing.

■ The same wall of water, preventing noise from the drive shaft housing, traps out the sound resulting from mechanical vibrations.

■ Mercury's exclusive Jet-Prop™ was all important to shift new silencing system. Exhaust gases and noise are being carried directly from the powerhead down the internal exhaust pipe and out through the Jet-Prop™ where they are unconsciously forced deep underwater.

■ Merc's Dyna Flo™, internal-type supercharger system keeps vibration from passing through the deep hullhead to the boat.

■ And to top it off, the new Mercs have an absolutely isolated steering arm to prevent sound from traveling out through the steering mechanism to the boat.

Yes the new Mercs are 50% quieter but it couldn't have been done with an ordinary method. It had to start with the engine.

■ In-line 4- and 6-cylinder design with inherent smooth balance.

■ Small bore and short stroke with smaller and lighter piston connecting rods and wrist pins for lower air turning losses.

■ Offset wrist pins that eliminate piston slap.

■ Shoulder pins with tighter fit throughout the engine.

■ Power-Dyne membrane clutches that "mop" the bottom motion and smooth out resistance ripples.

■ Flat plate flywheels that reduce the normal working stress of the crankshaft.

■ Improved rod valves... sealed with the crankshaft to make them quiet.

■ Full-ported construction throughout the engine.

More power from SOUND engineering

The silencing of the Merc is just part of the story for 1985 Mercury has a brand new 50 hp outboard... Merc 500

The last moments of the powerful new Merc outboard competitors, 90's and even competitors, 75 hp outboards. Is power at the prop, it is sound only to the 100 hp Merc 100. And, of course it has Merc's new silencing system.

All of the 1985 Mercs have been rebuilt and the higher horsepower models have a lower profile. New supporting study to smoother water, propellers, water pumps, and transom adhesive resistance, new vent valves, and redesigned cowls drive shaft housing and exhaust systems make the 1985 Mercs the series is outstanding.

Sound engineering at Mercury again brings you the highest horsepower, the a clear silence at power and the motor fuel economy... is outboard that set 50% quiet. You'll get more boating fun and even more R/C for your money with the 1985 Mercs... 100 90 60 50 30 20 15 10 and 2.5 horsepower.

Quality up...price down
Keep customers getting real value

Imperial gets about one half what the customer pays at the pump for Esso gasoline. The balance goes to provincial and federal taxes and to the dealer. Over the past ten years the amount Imperial nets for the gasoline sold through the service station has gone down in every state in Canada. At the same time, the quality has been steadily improved. Quality up — price down. That means better value for Esso customers.
